HISTORICAL AND BIOGRAPHICAL NOTES

Lambert Airport came into its own in the mid-1920s when it was acquired by the City of St. Louis from Albert Lambert. Charles Lindbergh worked at the Airport before making his famous trans-Atlantic flight in 1927. It is the first airfield with its own air traffic control system. At times, the airfield hosted the Missouri Air National Guard. In 1956, construction was completed on an iconic terminal designed by Minoru Yamasaki.
